

This will copy your local module into the node_modules folder, the same way it would do with a repository or git hosted module.

Obviously, this means your local module should have its own package.json, README.md, etc, like any regular node module.

This also means that you need to update your `node_module` copy every time you modify your original code. This can be achieved by:

